Belt Pirates

Several cartels of pirates attack supply freighters that have to stop over while travelling hyperspace. The PCs are ordered to investigate and possibly stop the attacks. It soon turns out that the pirates are a few nasty guys hiding in a mass of political exiles. They do have general support, because they also attack the many ships that hack into the local beacon network to steal ore asteroids.

Red Angel

A corpse is found floating in space. It is heavily damaged but a strange red angel tattoo can be found which consists of alien writing. The pattern is both a map and a key word to a system of extra dimensional tunnels. A secret organization wants to keep the system secret to use it for a coup against the local government. Other corpses exist, all belonging to the original guardians of the web way.

False Ambition

A deep space expedition encounters a problem in the form of a meteor storm. The captain ignores the advice of the science officer and only the PCs intervention prevents the catastrophe. A sizeable faction of the crew wants the science officer to take over, especially as the dark nebula comes closer. The officer is reluctant but the suspended EVA specialist pushes for a mutiny to regain his former position. Will loyalty or self-preservation prevail?
